

Deliverable Index

Welcome to the Creative Writing Transition Doc!

This document was created to document and explain the Creative Writing Transition project completed in the Fall semester of 2025. This project was launched to better display and make accessible contests, workshops, and other opportunities for students within the Creative Writing department of NC State University.

The other tabs, Spreadsheet, Calendar, and Alumni Achievements, are explanations of their value to students and instructions for editors who will be maintaining the files and making additions as needed.

Resource Index

 Creative Writing Resources

Creative Writing Google Calendar

Alumni Information Request Form

Spreadsheet

Spreadsheet editing instructions

The Creative Writing Resources spreadsheet has been created so that students within the creative writing department can access opportunities that will develop their skills and network that will extend beyond their graduation from the program.

How to add and edit entries

1. When selecting a new writing opportunity please practice due diligence, verifying the source is credible. Then record key information, including most importantly:
 - Deadline
 - Fees,
 - Intended Audience
 - Awards,
 - Eligibility
2. The information from Columns C - E should be filled with selections from the grey drop down menus that appear on empty entries. When an editor clicks an empty drop down menu choices of colors will appear. The selections will help students quickly locate opportunities most relevant for them. For columns C-E the drop down menus can only host a single choice. The categories were meant to be static when they were created.

Explanation of the Columns

- Column A - Name of Organization/Opportunity
 - Column B - Deadlines for applications and submissions (review yearly)
 - Column C - Opportunity Type
 - Column D - Audience - meaning which type of students are eligible
 - Column E - What kind of writing is included? (Poetry, Fiction, All)
3. Column F - Column F is unique because its the only column that allows the editor to make multiple selections. Unlike the others it is not binary and includes information that many readers may find relevant. Upon initial publication the filters included:

- Location, categorized by whether the opportunity is within N.C. an American region, or international
- Award, specifically whether compensation was over $500
- Underrepresented Writers. If an opportunity is designated for a certain underrepresented group then it will have this category
- Translations, for opportunities that focus on translations of creative literary works

If an editor believes a new selection/filter to categorize information is needed its highly recommended to place this in column F than to make an entirely new column.

- 4. Maintenance - In order for Creative Writing Resources to continue to be of relevance, entries should be reviewed at the end of each semester. Reviews should monitor writing opportunities for any changes in the attributes including submission criteria and deadlines. Of course if any opportunity has become defunct or dormant then it is important to remove them entirely.

Think of the spreadsheet as a living document that changes as the writing community evolves in North Carolina and elsewhere.

- 5. Permissions: Remember permission to edit the file should only remain with an administrator or designated editors, who are tasked with removing old entries or adding new ones.

Calendar

Google Calendar Maintenance Instructions

A Google Calendar titled “Creative Writing Calendar” has been created to track deadlines for awards, grants, residencies, and other application-based opportunities. The Creative Writing department may also use this calendar to track and promote Creative Writing events on NC State’s campus.

Calendar Code Key

Creative Writing students are interested in a variety of opportunities, including awards, grants, residencies, fellowships, internships, and/or conferences. Therefore, a key is utilized to distinguish these opportunities. Each type of opportunity has been assigned a key code and color. This key is defined in a repeating event (Creative Writing Code Key) at the top of the calendar.

Ex. CODE: Definition (Google Calendar Color)

- AWD: Award Deadline (Sage)
- CON: Conference Dates (Tangerine)
- EVT: Creative Writing Event (Default Calendar Color)
- FEL: Fellowship Application Deadline (Banana)
- GRT: Grant Deadline (Grape)
- INT: Internship Application Deadline (Graphite)
- PUB: Publication Deadline (Blueberry)
- RES: Residency Application Deadline (Tomato)

Adding Events/Deadlines

Adding application deadlines and creative writing events to this calendar is encouraged. To add an event to the calendar:

1. Click the “Create” button and select “Event”.
2. Enter a title using the appropriate code in the title of the event.
 - a. Ex., an award deadline would use the AWD key (AWD: North Carolina Writers’ Contest)
3. Add a date and time. If no time is specified, you can select “All day”.
4. If the event is recurring, set a repeat schedule.
5. Add any relevant information and/or links in the event description.
6. Click the calendar icon, select “Creative Writing Calendar”, if not already selected.

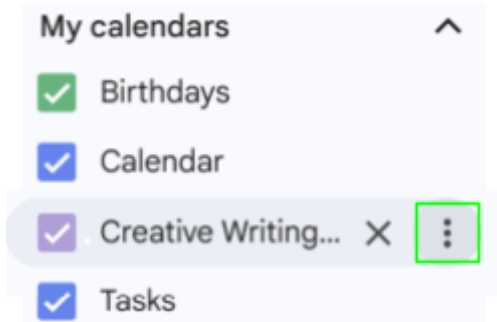

7. Select the color according to the calendar color code.

8. Once all information is complete, click “Save”.

Managing Permissions & Sharing the Calendar

1. Under “My calendars” on the side panel, hover over “Creative Writing Calendar”.
2. Click the three stacked dots, then click “Settings and sharing”.

3. Under “Shared with,” Click “Add people and groups”.
4. Enter the person’s email or listserv email.
5. Select a permission level from the drop-down. Please see Control access to a shared calendar for more information.
 - a. Faculty managing the calendar should receive “Make changes and manage sharing” permissions.
 - b. If you would like students to see the colors associated with events, select “Make changes to events”. Note: This allows students to add, edit, and delete events.
 - c. If you do not want students to have access to edit events, select “See all event details”. Note: Students will not see colors associated with events, but will still have access to the key code.
6. Click “Send” to share the calendar.
7. To share a link to the calendar, “Get shareable link”.